Given the time spread between printing of such supplements as Parade Magazine and their appearance I believe today's makes it apparent that Bush fired Webster unexpectedly, probably looking for a Gulf-war goat. I did not keep the story about his "resignation" but I believe it was week before this past one. This story refers to him as the director, with no indication of any intention to retire. The time spread used to be thre weeks. If he had had any plans for retiring he or the CIA's information office would have informed Maas and/or Parade. 5/19/91
